Crazy* kings

① King Henry VIII had six wives. Do you know their names? Read the text to find out.

Henry VIII (1491-1547, King from 1509)

Henry and his six wives

When Henry VIII became king he was 18. He danced and sang well. Everyone loved him. But he needed a son. His first wife - Catherine of Aragon - was Spanish. Catherine and Henry had a daughter, Mary. Henry wasn't happy. He wanted a different... "The Church" in Rome said no. So Henry started the Church of England. Then he and Catherine divorced.

Henry then married Anne Boleyn. She had a daughter, Elizabeth. But Anne was in love with her brother, and Henry heard about it. He sent her to the Tower of London. There they cut off her head, or "beheaded" her. Next Henry married Jane Seymour. She had a son, Edward, but then she died.

After that Henry married a German princess, Anne of Cleves. She was ugly. "She looks like a boar," Henry said. They divorced. Then Henry married Catherine Howard. She was 20 and beautiful, and Henry was 45. Catherine lost her head when Henry heard about her boyfriend. Henry's last wife was Katherine Parr. She was nice to Henry - and she survived! Henry's son Edward was the next king.

② What happened to Henry's wives? Write these words next to the names. They make a rhyme that English children learn at school.

George III (1738-1820, King from 1760)

George III had 15 children. He loved his wife, Charlotte. He gave Buckingham Palace to her! He studied the stars and he loved reading. He liked country life too. He grew his own fruit and vegetables. The British liked him and called him 'The Farmer King'. But Britain lost America under George III!

In later life George III went crazy. He talked to trees and shouted 'Isaac! Isaac! You can't rule* the country.' His oldest son - George, Prince of Wales - ruled it for him. George III hated the Prince. When George III died, the Prince became King George IV.
